Staying out of the doghouse is everyone's desire and countless times have we heard people mention how they either got in or were able to get out. The book is a compilation of funny anecdotes, tips, advice, and words of encouragement for staying "out of the doghouse". Advice comes from both male and female and is sure to bring a smile or laugh. Several blank pages are provided at the end, so you can document your own ideas or those of others that might have been missed. When hosting our son's rehearsal dinner, the theme for the evening revolved around this idea. We requested those attending to write down a few suggestions on how Ross could "stay out of the doghouse". I held on to those remarks and added to them over the years. Inspired to produce a book, I talked with people from all walks of life to determine consensus on the answer. Author's royalties are donated to Autism Research. The number of children diagnosed, on a daily basis is staggering and to date there is no known cure. Just remember there is no "do over" in life ~ so live, love and laugh"!
